CURT MULDER

CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Curt Mulder is Chief Executive Officer of Wolverine Construction, where he sets the company's long-term direction and focuses on strategic relationships, growth and major opportunities.

Curt joined Wolverine in 1998 and has spent his entire career with the company. He began in the field as a laborer on steel and carpentry crews while completing college, then moved into project management and led healthcare, industrial, design-build, multi-unit residential and commercial work across Michigan and beyond. He later served as Vice President of Wolverine's Multi-Unit Residential Division and Industrial Division before becoming President in 2016. He purchased the company in 2018 and served as President and CEO until Wolverine separated the President and CEO roles in 2026.

His leadership is grounded in hands-on construction experience and an engineer's view of risk and opportunity. Curt is especially interested in the tradition of the master builder, bringing together clients, designers, craftspeople, materials and communities to create buildings and relationships that last. He has helped guide Wolverine's evolution from a respected local contractor into a purpose-driven construction company serving clients across Michigan and nationwide.

As CEO, Curt serves as a primary external voice for Wolverine and works closely with clients, partners and civic leaders. He is also committed to employee development, community investment and strengthening West Michigan's built environment.
